ALGERIA BENEFITS

The period 1876 to 1896 was the period of intense colonization. Now we see that during these twenty years the population, which had only increased population, which had only increased to a few crowned heads, as proposed on the preceding twenty the period by the period to the period 1.300,000 without any really important increases in the territory of Algeria, writes Davis Edwards from Paris. In the twenty years which followed, and during which there was no serious extension in the populated territory, the population of Algeria increased again by about 1,000,000.

The movement of exchange between Algeria and the United States has not Algeria and the United States has not been large in proportion to the impor-tance of the North American market. The cause lies in the fact of the similarity as regards agriculture and mining of the two countries and the ab-sence of a regular trade service. In spite of this, the situation could become advantageous for the United States, which saw its imports mount from $3,500,000 in 1999 to $13,000,000 in 1913, while exports from Algeria to the United States in the same time re mained almost stationary. The American goods most usually sold in this colony are mineral oils, machines and tools of every kind, machines and tools of every kind, building wood and leaf tobacco. The United States obtains in Algeria raw cork, raw hides, vegetable hair and raw tartar, but it is mostly for the supply of fresh and dried goatskins that the United States comes to Algeria. We should remember here that for some authority indicated the crop status generally was above the average, the cultivation was being rushed. Besides, the government forecast showed no likelihood of any important adverse change in temperatures or moisture supply.

Oats were relatively firm because of some pessimistic crop reports the first of the season.

Provisions receded with corn. profit from the experience of the United States. On the one hand, the raising of sheep, flock management, shearing, refining and classification of wools, and on the other hand the provision of green crops for food in times of drouth are the objects of the Al-gerian agricultural studies, and Al-gerian look for lessons from American experience

BY RULE OF FRENCH

In 1856 Algeria boasted 2,328,000 native inhabitants, and twenty years after, in 1876, she had 2,468,000, but during this period, although the work of conquest by France was finished colonization was scarcely encouraged at all.

The period 1876 to 1896 was the period of intense colonization. Now we for crutches: they are ice bags and pneumonia jackets.

Local Produce Market Lemons, due to the heavy demand for them during the hot weather, are going higher and higher in price. Cantaloups are still scarce although they are expected to be coming in more freely soon.

Watermelons are still being shipped away for outside consumption and are plentiful in all Phoenix retail houses. New potatoes are now plenti-
